Amgen, Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA) and University of Oklahoma's Pharmacy Management Consultants (PMC) Partner to Improve Medicaid Outcomes Amgen's First Public-Private Partnership with a State Medicaid Agency to Help Improve Patient Health Care Needs Through Data, Science and Information

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. and OKLAHOMA CITY – The OHCA, PMC and Amgen today announced a new collaborative agreement to help improve clinical outcomes, experience and satisfaction for Oklahoma's 796,000 SoonerCare members. Results from the projects also could lay the groundwork for innovative ways to look at patient outcomes and measures for medication reimbursement.

The parties intend for initial research projects to use de-identified claims data to gain insights about medication adherence, missed diagnoses, heightened disease risk and other clinical indicators in Oklahoma's SoonerCare population. Disease states of special interest to each participant include autoimmune diseases, bone health/osteoporosis, migraine and oncology care. The expectation is that findings from the research will help support the development of preventive measures – for instance, identifying post fracture patients and working to educate them on the importance of disease management. In many cases, the cost of preventive therapy is a fraction of the cost of hospitalization, and valuable to the patient's health and well-being. Collectively, this information can help optimize overall patient outcomes and minimize unnecessary healthcare spending across the country.

"Leveraging our collaborative research experience and population health unit, Amgen is excited to engage in our first partnership with a state Medicaid agency to evaluate and gain insights on Medicaid health plan data. Through this unique partnership, we look forward to working with OHCA and PMC to apply that information in identifying opportunities, including value-based programs, to improve costs, quality of care and the patient experience in Oklahoma," said Peter Juhn M.D., M.P.H., vice president, Global Value-Based Partnerships at Amgen.
